R. O. T. C. Unit For Point Loma High

Of very much importance to the older high school boys of Point Loma is the word received this week that thru interest of many local parents and the government an R. O. T. C. unit will be organized at Point Loma high as soon as school convenes in September.

A platoon of fifty boys will be organized with drill during the 6th period, 1:50 to 2:50 each day, and will be open to those 16 years of age and over.

The government will likely furnish uniforms for the boys, who may go to the high school any time after September 1, to plan their program, so it may include this special privilege.

San Diego High and Hoover High have each had an R. O. T. C. unit for some time and the boys here should think themselves fortunate to share in this body and character building work.

Police To Gather Loose Dogs From Beach

Lieut. Yancy Adams of the Ocean Beach police reports that during the past thirty days at our local beach and at Mission Beach sixteen people have been bitten by loose dogs allowed to run on the beach. Of these eleven were children and five adults. These are only the ones reported to police and there may have been several others.

On account of danger now from rabies, Lieut. Adams says the ordinance to enforce owners to have their dogs on leash must be adhered to, and any dogs found running loose on the beach will be taken up.

Owners of dogs will please take the friendly warning of the police and take proper care of their canines. Your dog may be friendly enough with children or grownups but when they meet strange dogs or someone else's dog jumps on to yours they think only of self protection and that means someone might get hurt.

JOPLING WILL REDUCE YOUR TAXES

The question is often asked why direct business efficiency is not applied to the various county offices. The answer is that usually politicians, not business men, are in authority. An exception to this condition is found in Howard Jopling, candidate for County Recorder at the primary election August 28. Mr. Jopling has a clean, successful business career behind him, which is a guarantee that the same efficiency will be applied to the County Recorder's office. And Efficiency Means Lower Taxes.

Except under the present Recorder, this office has always paid a large profit to the county. But last year the Recorder's office showed a heavy loss of over $2640.00 and for the first ten months of this year it is in the red $992.00. Can the taxpayers afford to throw their money away? There is something radically wrong with the management of an office which has a mounting overhead in the face of decreased business.

Howard Jopling can put the Recorder's office back on a paying basis and save the taxpayers money. His record as a successful business man is well known. He is honest and fearless and can be depended upon to keep his word and work for the interests of the taxpayer. A vote for Jopling for recorder is a vote for lower taxes.

Tich's Tavern To Open In Benbough Building

The Ocean Beach dance hall at the foot of Newport avenue (our 'Main' street) is due for a remodeling of extensive proportions with a formal opening billed for August 25th. This commodious corner was a gala place for many years under ownership of Wm. E. Benbough who built the structure. It is now the property of the Capitol Co. who have leased it to Norwood G. Tichenor.

According to information given, some ten or twelve carpenters as well as a good many other workmen will start remodeling. A large part of the present dance floor is good and will be left in its present state, except for sanding and refinishing, this part will be 9100 square feet and it is said will accommodate 1500 couple for dancing. The interior will all be refurnished in silver and black, the orchestra stand will remain in the southeast corner. In the northwest corner there will be 110 foot circular bar. Mr. Tichenor states a large Neon sign "Tich's Tavern" will be placed on the roof of the building, as large as the Hof Brau sign in San Diego. This new sign will be visible to practically all parts of the North Shore district.

A seven piece orchestra will be engaged for dancing, which will be free to all. Colored cement flooring will replace the old wood flooring to be torn up that now surrounds the dance floor. Kitchens will be installed along the ocean side of the building, with serving tables just inside the large room for the accommodation of patrons.

Mr. Tichenor now conducts a similar place at 421 University avenue.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE TO MEET MONDAY, AUGUST 13

The regular meeting of the Ocean Beach Chamber of Commerce will be held Monday evening August 13.

All citizens and business people interested in any way of improving the community are invited to attend this meeting and offer suggestions which might be worthy of consideration and action.

The Woman's clubhouse is the meeting place and the time is 8 p. m.

VIRGINIA DORMAN CONDUCTING CAFE AT PACIFIC BEACH

Mrs. E. A. Dorman, who is well known at Ocean Beach, formerly at Frank Koettlers place and before that at the Silver Spray hotel, has for several weeks been conducting the Virginia "D" Cafe, corner Cass and Garnet Sts., at Pacific Beach.

Mrs. Dorman is serving worthwhile meals and her advertisement of turkey dinners, etc., will be found elsewhere in the Ocean Beach News. If you are out for a little ride and a good meal, we are sure you will enjoy her home made lemon pies and other good things to eat.

ROYAL NEIGHBORS OF AMERICA ENJOY POT LUCK AND CARDS

The Royal Neighbors of America held their pot luck dinner and quilt drawing, August 2, at the Ocean Beach woman's club, which was enjoyed by a large crowd of members.

Mary Moore of 4865 Cape May avenue, won the quilt.

Mrs. Hamill, state supervisor and Mrs. Cordingly, district deputy, both gave short but interesting talks.

The rest of the evening was spent in playing cards and dancing.

Our next meeting will be on August 16. Refreshments will be served. All members are urged to be present.

METHODIST CHURCH SERVICES

"Is There Any Place for Religion in This Modern Day?" is the subject for the sermon to be preached by Rev. James Hughes, pastor of the church. The service will begin at 11 o'clock. The music will be in charge of Mrs. Ray Forsythe.

The Sunday school hour for different age groups, beginning at 9:45 a. m. "What you would have appear in the life of a nation, you must first put in the school room."

Sunday evening Epworth league for young people of high school and college age, from 7 o'clock to 8:30. The church is situated on Sunset Cliffs Blvd., between Saratoga and Santa Monica avenues.

MUSINGS WHILE MEANDERING

(By Merrill Stuart)

Happiness—is it in the heart or in the head, or where? Who knows, except that it's a high-water mark in interludes of monotony; and that it comes not tomorrow, but here and now—or never!

Here—within hearts of friends; in thoughtful kindnesses; in footsteps of those who climb the slopes to bring bits of cheer, stories of travel, little gifts. In simple common things of every-day life; small hourly adventures. In that inner jubilation that somehow floats one over sharp rocks and shifting sand dunes.

Now—in sunsets all colorful; kaleidoscope of bright lights over the city; fragrance and mist of dawn; caressing coolness of sea air on a summer night; palm trees limned against moonlight sky. Smiles in eyes of comrades; companionship of trustful animals; books beguiling long and lonely evenings. Happy hours with congenial friends listening to music's rhythm at a gorgeous theatre. Contempt of far-flung miseries which may never come any nearer; regal indifference to lean days; simplified needs. Enthusiasms; to be alive, thrilling to the good fun of living—no matter what happens.

"Life is so full of a number of things, we should all be as happy as kings," and with this sentiment I agree.

Attended large political meeting recently, and felt there a polished-up, glowing sort of atmosphere, a shining expectancy.

Perfect ventilation, good lighting, flowers, gay orchestra, talented entertainers. Well-gowned and gracious women introducing speakers. And right here I rise to remark that the inclusion of women in politics adds immensely to the gaiety of nations.

Candidates these days—in their eager scramble for jobs—are alive to the demands of the hour, and cleverly inventive in presenting old issues at new angles: Tariff interlarded with taffy, promises served with applesauce, statistics sugar-coated, personality plus! Keen humor, clashing wits, nicknames, slang, slogans, gags—and knowledge of mob psychology—all keep audience goggle-eyed with amusement and interest.

Well, why not? Politics is dry enough business anyway. High time old campaign stuff is burnished and made to glisten. Dullness is out of date. Boredom spells—no votes! The show's the thing nowadays!

Lately passing a vine-covered porch I saw a mockingbird within a cage. With muffled throat and lack lustre eyes it sat in a hopeless huddle. Just outside, palm fronds waved to the sky—home and freedom. I paused to remember the story of another imprisoned songster, whose mother one day took it food—poisoned berries—and the young bird died. How wise the mother to know it is happier to die than to live in captivity.

My cat Wee and a scrawny roadrunner have declared a truce, both drinking from same water basin, and it matters not in their common need to quench thirst whether the basin be of tin or cut glass.

Drouth is upon the land. Water evaporates under scorching sun; birds and animals gasp and perish. Replenish that basin once a day with fresh water, all we who love little creatures about us, and they will love us in turn.

Hope that dear lady with basket of home-made candy meanders up my way soon. Believe it or not, it's the very best ever!

COLORADO-ILLINOIS PARTY

The Colorado State Society and the Illinois Club will hold their monthly dance and card party at the chamber of commerce, Saturday night, August 11. All former Coloradians and Illinoisians and members of other state societies are cordially invited.

SERA Band Concert Advanced One Day

Word was received this week by the Ocean Beach chamber of commerce that owing to conflicting dates the SERA band concert announced in the News last week for Saturday, August 18, must be advanced one day to Friday, August 17th, also that it is not practical to hold the concert in the civic center building but that a platform, entirely out-of-door, should be arranged with lights for the musicians. It is believed the vacant corner at foot of Newport avenue to be the best place and lighting will be connected up there for that evening's entertainment.

Those people who were planning picnics and a visit with friends during the evening of the band concert will note the change of date, now given as Friday evening, August 17.

SALES TAX LAST QUARTER OVER TWELVE MILLION

Sacramento, August 6—Sale tax collections in California for April, May and June amounted to $12,410,846.06, the State Board of Equalization announced today.

This amount exceeded collections for any previous quarter since the law went into effect, the Board said. A total of $12,078,000 from the sales tax in the last quarter of 1933 was the nearest approach to this figure.

The sales tax is collected by the state to be returned to the counties for public school expenses.

A FEW OF THE EDITORIALS ENDORSING RAY L. RILEY

(Political Advertisement)

"If there is one man in the state capitol who is diligent in the public's business and therefore comes before the electorate with a just and righteous claim to reelection it is State Controller Ray L. Riley.

Owing to the peculiarities of the state law, the candidates for this office must seek a party nomination when the duties of the office itself are non-partisan.

What the people need in this position is not a Democrat or a Republican but an honest and conscientious citizen, and Ray L. Riley is both.

During his term he has saved the taxpayers millions of dollars thru his careful scrutiny and his unrelenting watchfulness in seeing to it that all state expenditures are kept strictly within the law.

If there is any question of irregularity or shadow of illegality of any financial transaction, Riley refuses to honor the claims until the attorney general's office or the courts have given him a ruling.

It also is highly desirable that the controller be entirely independent of control by other branches of the state government or politician who are in charge thereof.

Riley has proved himself to be such an official.

And the knowledge of that fact has prevented many unscrupulous and dubious raids on the state funds.

If there be some opposition to him in certain quarters today, it can be traced to the very fact that Ray L. Riley is his own man and will not compromise his own or the state's integrity.

Good citizens everywhere from Siskiyou to San Diego should unite to insure Ray Riley's reelection. California will need him on the job during the next four years, not some inexperienced official."

City Council Postpones Fishing Pier Again

The San Diego City council on Monday gave short time for consideration of a fishing pier at Ocean Beach. The city manager stated his estimate on the pier, after consulting experienced builders was $15,000, and would be better if built on contract, rather than as an SERA project. Short hours of labor, waiting for material and other shortcomings were given as disadvantages for consideration as an SERA project. He said possibly the top deck might be furnished and laid by SERA, other than that skilled labor was not listed that could carry on this work. The plans call for a pier 1200 feet long, of which 1,000 feet will be 10 feet wide and the last 200 feet to be 20 feet wide. Heavy steel rail will be used as piles set 6 feet in solid rock and concrete.

Application has already been made for two concessions at the end of the pier, for the selling of food and bait.

Claiming they wanted more time to study the project, as well as a drawing and plans for each councilman, the consideration was laid over on the table for another week.

A great deal more interest should be shown by local business people and property owners, by their attendance at the council meeting next Monday. The time required is only about an hour, and surely can be spared by many, who have so far displayed no active interest and support in the matter.

Among those present at the council session last were Mrs. Calvin Boyd and Mrs. Chas. King of the Grace Apts. and Mrs. J. A. Johnson of Soto street; Messrs. Carl Schroder, Dr. Baily, H. J. Thomas, J. W. Dick, John McAlpine, John Alford, Frank B. McElwee, Arthur Hubbard and the editor.

New Service Station and Drive-In Market

E. C. Rollins of 2228 Abbott St., owner of the Bluebell court property, and a resident of Ocean Beach for ten years or more is busy this week completing a new service station at corner of Voltaire and Bacon street where he owns property 75x100 ft.

Modern equipment is being installed, Rocket gasoline will be the main product, and a hydraulic hoist will be ready for service to patrons of the station.

Within a few weeks Mr. Rollins also expects to have a drive-in market on this same corner which gets lot of travel to and from Ocean Beach.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

"This is the word of the Lord unto Zerubbabel, saying, Not by might, nor by power, but by my spirit, saith the Lord of hosts." This passage from Zechariah is the Golden Text in the Lesson-Sermon on "Spirit" on Sunday in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, branches of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Mass.

Among the Scriptural selections in the Lesson-Sermon are the demands and promises of Jesus, from the Gospel of John: "Let not your heart be troubled: ye believe in God, believe also in me. . . Believe me that I am in the Father, and the Father in me; or else believe me for the very works' sake. Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that believeth on me, the works that I do shall he do also; and greater works than these shall he do; because I go unto my Father."

A citation from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, states: "In Science, you can have no power opposed to God, and the physical senses must give up their false testimony. Your influence for good depends upon the weight you throw into the right scale. The good you do and embody gives you the only power obtainable."

CITY COUNCIL APPROVES SERA APPLICATIONS

In the Monday morning session the city council approved an application to the SERA for construction of tennis courts at Arista and Whitman sts., at a total cost of $7,068. The city will stand about half the cost it was reported.

A swimming float for Mission bay under a like project was also approved for $323.

Meeting Here Tonight To Hear Candidates

A public meeting has been called at the Ocean Beach Woman's clubhouse for tonight, Friday, August 10th, at 7:30 p. m., for the purpose of giving the several candidates for the county offices an opportunity to state their platform and make such other comment as they see fit.

Among the speakers scheduled are Thomas Whelan for district attorney; Phillip Smith for justice of the peace, Dept. 3; Eugene Daney for justice of the peace Dept. 2; Chester Gunn for coroner; Richard W. Chadwick for sheriff; Wayne Compton for state senator; Arthur Swope for recorder and Will S. Heller for treasurer.

This meeting is being sponsored by a representative group of Ocean Beach residents and all citizens are invited to be present.

KIWANIANS HEAR OF THE VAGARIES OF SCIENCE

Jake Watson was chairman of the day for Wednesday noon Kiwanis luncheon, having as his speaker, Robert Williams, of San Diego. The visitor used as his subject: "Little Steps in Science," telling of the limitlessness of matter and material, demonstrating from a cup on the table the extent to which the infinite must be considered. Williams said that he believed the time would come when those who are totally blind would be made to see in some manner when it was learned to control the light rays and connect them up with nerves of sight, much in the same manner as is now used in making the deaf hear.

Dr. Thayer gave a few minutes talk on his recent vacation in the San Bernardino mountains.

Dr. I. W. Parks gave a short report on the extensive plans being made for the California-Nevada district convention at Coronado in October and indications are that this affair will be a most enjoyable event for members and their wives.

Dick Floyd was a guest of Jake Watson and Dr. J. W. Harrison of the Altadena club and J. H. Westover of the Yuma club were visiting Kiwanians.

Mrs. F. M. Tibbets, 4824 Santa Monica avenue, was agreeably surprised last Sunday morning by the arrival home for a visit of her son, Henry V. Tibbets of Pearl Harbor, Hawaii; and a few minutes later her daughter, May Tibbets and granddaughter Shirley, accompanied by Ray Noland arrived from Los Angeles to spend the day. Henry Tibbets was in Honolulu during the reception for President Roosevelt and said it was a real gala occasion at least $10,000 having been spent for Japanese lanterns and decorations, in honor of the President.

A picnic supper was held Tuesday evening at the Pepper grove in Balboa park by a group of young people, members of Point Loma high school orchestra. After the supper the group attended the "Midsummer Night Symphony" at the organ pavilion, directed by Nino Marcelli. Those attending were Nina and Turner Kline, Laurence Grimmell, Philip Campbell, Celia and Anna Martin, Arnold Dewees, David Sterne and Joyce Settle of Ocean Beach; David Bryant, Betty and Margery Boone of Loma Portal. Mrs. Sterne chaperoned the party, all of whom greatly enjoyed both picnic and symphony.

BAPTIST CHURCH SERVICES

Next Sunday morning the pastor will speak on the subject "Supreme Experiences," and in the evening at 7:30 following a brief song service, the pastor will again speak. The sermon theme will be "Bare Walls." The choir will render special music and in the evening the men's quartet will sing. The Bible school session begins at 9:45 a. m. and the Young People's meeting at 6:30 p. m. You are cordially invited to these services.

General Strike in San Francisco Area Collapses—North Dakota's Hot Political Row—Mrs. McAdoo Divorces the Senator.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

© by Western Newspaper Union.

ONCE more it has been demonstrated that the general strike is not a successful weapon in the hands of organized labor in the United States.

Harry Bridges

The San Francisco unions, dominated for the moment by radicals, undertook to use this weapon, and within two days were forced to admit their failure. Governor Merriam, Mayor Rossi and other officials, strongly backed by public opinion, were determined that San Francisco and the surrounding communities should not be deprived of the necessities of life, that the embargo on food shipments should be broken and that transportation should not be stopped. Nearly 8,000 members of the National Guard were mobilized to aid the police, and their efforts were seconded by hastily formed bands of vigilantes which raided the headquarters and gathering places of the Communists. The central committee in charge of the strike soon realized the movement was collapsing and the conservative members, regaining control, relaxed the restrictions, and made an offer of arbitration under certain conditions.

On Thursday the general strike was formally called off and the men ordered back to work.

General Johnson, NRA administrator, acting as spokesman for the federal maritime dispute board there, was on hand determined to bring about a peaceful settlement. The Pacific coast maritime strike, on behalf of which the mass walkout was called, remained a difficult problem, for the longshoremen and maritime workers were insistent that the main dispute in their case, control of the "hiring halls," should not be subjected to arbitration.

To the average person the whole thing looked unreasonable and unnecessary. The longshoremen, like their fellow workers all along the west coast, have been on strike for changed working conditions, and were joined by the marine workers and teamsters. Then Joseph P. Ryan, national president of the longshoremen, signed an agreement that the men would return to work pending arbitration and a labor disputes board was appointed by President Roosevelt. But Harry Bridges, an Australian radical who is head of the local maritime workers, gained control of the situation and absolutely blocked the move for arbitration, persuading the men to repudiate the Ryan agreement. In the unions of the San Francisco metropolitan area it is said the conservatives outnumber the radicals, but the latter are trained in the tactics of intimidation and are seeking to wreck the trades unions for the benefit of the cause of Communism.

Mayor Angelo J. Rossi announced a pledge to run every "Communist agitator" out of San Francisco. The pledge, announced through an emergency citizens' committee, said:

"I pledge to you that I, as chief executive in San Francisco, to the full extent of my authority, will run out of San Francisco every Communist agitator, and this is going to be a continuing policy in San Francisco."

THERE was disquieting strike news from many parts of the country. The unions of Portland, Ore., were pushing their plans for a general strike, and their officials said nothing could now be done to prevent it. The truck drivers of Minneapolis and their helpers voted for a renewal of their strike which in May tied up transportation and resulted in fatal riots.

Representatives of 40 out of 42 locals of the United Textile Workers in Alabama decided on a state-wide strike which will affect 18,000 operatives. The date was not announced. Demands made to the employers include: Thirty hour week with $12 minimum pay, abolition of the "stretch-out" system, reinstatement of all jobs abolished under the stretchout system; re-employment of all workers discharged for union activity and recognition of the textile workers' union for collective bargaining under provisions of the NRA.

Employees of Walter J. Kohler in Kohler village, Wisconsin, are out on strike and began picketing the plant, though it has been closed down since July 4. These workers for whom Kohler built and maintained an "ideal" industrial town and who have been treated with remarkable generosity by the company, demand recognition of their union, a minimum wage of 65 cents an hour and a 30-hour week. The company has its own employees' union, a minimum wage of 40 cents an hour, and a 40-hour week.

CONSTITUTIONALITY of the Bankhead cotton act is to be tested in the federal courts. Gaston Therrell of Columbus, Miss., has served notice that he will bring the suit in the United States district court at Meridian, directing it against Henry A. Wallace, secretary of agriculture, and internal revenue and extension officials in the state charged with execution of the act's provisions.

HOUSING conditions in the United States amply demonstrate the need for new housing. Acting Secretary Dickinson of the Commerce department said in making public results of a national "real property inventory," now being conducted by the Commerce department.

Sixteen per cent of 1,811,462 dwellings in 99 cities are in crowded condition "or worse," Mr. Dickinson said. An additional 16.6 per cent are in need of structural repairs and 44.7 per cent need minor repairs. The incomplete returns show 32,442 houses, or 2.34 per cent of the total, as "unfit for human habitation."

NORTH DAKOTA was in a state of political chaos, with two men battling for the governorship and the control of the state government and National Guard. William H. Langer, according to a ruling of the State Supreme court, was no longer entitled to hold the office of governor because of his recent conviction on charges of conspiracy to defraud the federal government.

Ole H. Olson

The court decreed that he must give up his office to Gov. Ole H. Olson. Langer defied the court, refused to move out of office, summoned the National Guard to support him and called a special session of the legislature, which he dominates.

Olson countermanded these orders, and Adj. Gen. Earle R. Sarles seemed to side with him, though he kept two companies of the National Guard on duty in Bismarck to quell possible disorders. It was reported that thousands of farmers were on their way to the capital city determined to support Langer in whatever action he might demand. It was believed the legislature would vote wholesale impeachments of state officials, possibly including the members of the Supreme court, who voted to oust Langer.

State Senator A. B. Bonzer, in an address at Bismarck, declared the jurists had "pretended to base their decision as though interpreting the constitution of this state."

"The Supreme court of this state," he said, "has linked itself with the federal courts in an endeavor to continue the persecution of one who has dared to be a leader for the common people—namely, Gov. William Langer."

Langer and several co-defendants were convicted in June. The federal government charged that the Langer group forced federal employees to contribute to a political fund. This fund, it was said, was collected supposedly for a newspaper. The government contended that the money eventually went into the campaign chest. Langer soon afterward was re-nominated by an overwhelming vote, and following this he was sentenced to 18 months in prison.

SENATOR WILLIAM G. McADOO of California was too fond of politics and travel to suit his wife, whose interests were in sculpture, painting and home life. So the former Eleanor Wilson, daughter of the war-time President, went before a judge in Los Angeles with her complaint and in 42 minutes had been granted an interlocutory divorce decree. "Mental cruelty" was the charge, and Mrs. McAdoo testified that the senator had been living almost entirely in Washington for two years, and that it was impossible for her to reside in the National Capital because the climate there was injurious to her health.

Senator McAdoo did not contest the divorce, and there was a property settlement the details of which were not made public. The custody of the two children was vested in both parents. It was revealed that the McAdoos have been separated since last December.

DAYS of torrential rain in the mountains of southern Poland resulted in raging floods that poured through the valleys, drowning perhaps as many as three hundred persons. More than 55,000 were without food and shelter. The property loss was tremendous, all the crops just harvested being ruined.

Many popular resorts crowded by summer vacationists were cut off. Eighty-three camps of Boy and Girl Scouts were evacuated, after the youths experienced harrowing difficulties.

FOR several hours earthquakes shook all Panama and Costa Rica, but the Panama canal was unhurt. The most serious damage was at David, Panama, not far from the Costa Rican border. There many buildings fell and scores of persons were injured. Considerable losses were sustained also at Puerto Armuelles. The United Fruit company's Pacific side banana headquarters. One American soldier was killed by jumping from a barracks window at Fort Davis.

PRESIDENTIAL SECRETARY MARVIN MINTYRE announced that the President had created a special committee to formulate a new federal policy concerning the generation and distribution of electricity, and in Washington this was looked upon as a probable move for the nationalization of the power industry.

Sec'y Ickes

In a letter to Secretary Ickes asking him to head the committee, Mr. Roosevelt said: "Its duty will be to develop a plan for the closer co-operation of the several factors in our electrical power supply—both public and private—whereby national policy in power matters may be unified and electricity be made more broadly available at cheaper rates to industry, to domestic, and, particularly, to agricultural consumers."

"As time goes on, there undoubtedly will be legislation on the subject of holding companies and for the regulation of electric current in interstate commerce. This committee should consider what lines should be followed in shaping up this legislation. Since a number of the states have commissions having jurisdiction over interstate power matters, it is necessary that whatever plan is developed should have regard to the powers of these various state commissions as well as of the states in general."

Besides Mr. Ickes, who is to act as chairman, the committee will consist of Dr. Elwood Mead, bureau of reclamation; Frank R. McNinch, federal power commission; Morris L. Cooke, of the PWA Mississippi valley committee; Maj. Gen. Edward M. Markham, chief of army engineers; Robert E. Healy, of the federal stock exchange commission; David E. Lillenthal, Tennessee valley authority, and T. W. Norcross, assistant chief of the forest service.

KING GEORGE of England officially opened the Mersey tunnel connecting Liverpool and Birkenhead, the largest underwater highway of its kind in the world. More than half a mile longer than the Holland tunnel of New York, the tube under the Mersey river stretches 11,380 feet from the main entrance in Birkenhead. In addition to the main tunnel, which accommodates four vehicles abreast, there are two-lane tributaries connecting the docks which give the whole undertaking a length of 15,465 feet.

The engineers responsible for the design of the $35,500,000 tube, chief among whom is Sir Basil Mott, concede they owe much to the experience American engineers gained on the Holland tunnel. They waited until the American tunnel had been operated before completing their plans for the Mersey project's ventilation plant.

TAMMANY HALL has a new chief, in the person of James J. Dooling, elected at the urgent demand of Postmaster General Farley. He took his seat at the head of the once great Democratic organization and announced that he would undertake to do two things. The first is to restore harmony within the society by eliminating factional disputes; the second, and perhaps harder task, is to change the New York point of view toward Tammany.

ALL Germany and most of the rest of the world heard Adolf Hitler justify his bloody purging of the Nazi party, involving the violent deaths of 77 persons, and his defiance of his enemies within and without the reich. The chancellor in his speech before a complaisant reichstag employed his well known gift of oratory to the limit, and unless the Berlin correspondents are mistaken, he won to his support the great majority of Germans who were wavering in their allegiance to him.

Chancellor Hitler

Hitler not only defended the slaughter of the alleged conspirators, but also gave warning that a like fate awaits all other "traitors."

"Every one is to know for all future times," he said, "that, if he raises his hand for attack against the state, certain death will be his lot."

Far from apologizing for the killings, he shouted: "I gave orders to shoot those who were mainly responsible for treachery. I gave further orders to burn out into the raw flesh the pest boil of our internal well poisoning and the poisoning of foreign countries. I was the supreme court of the land for 24 hours."

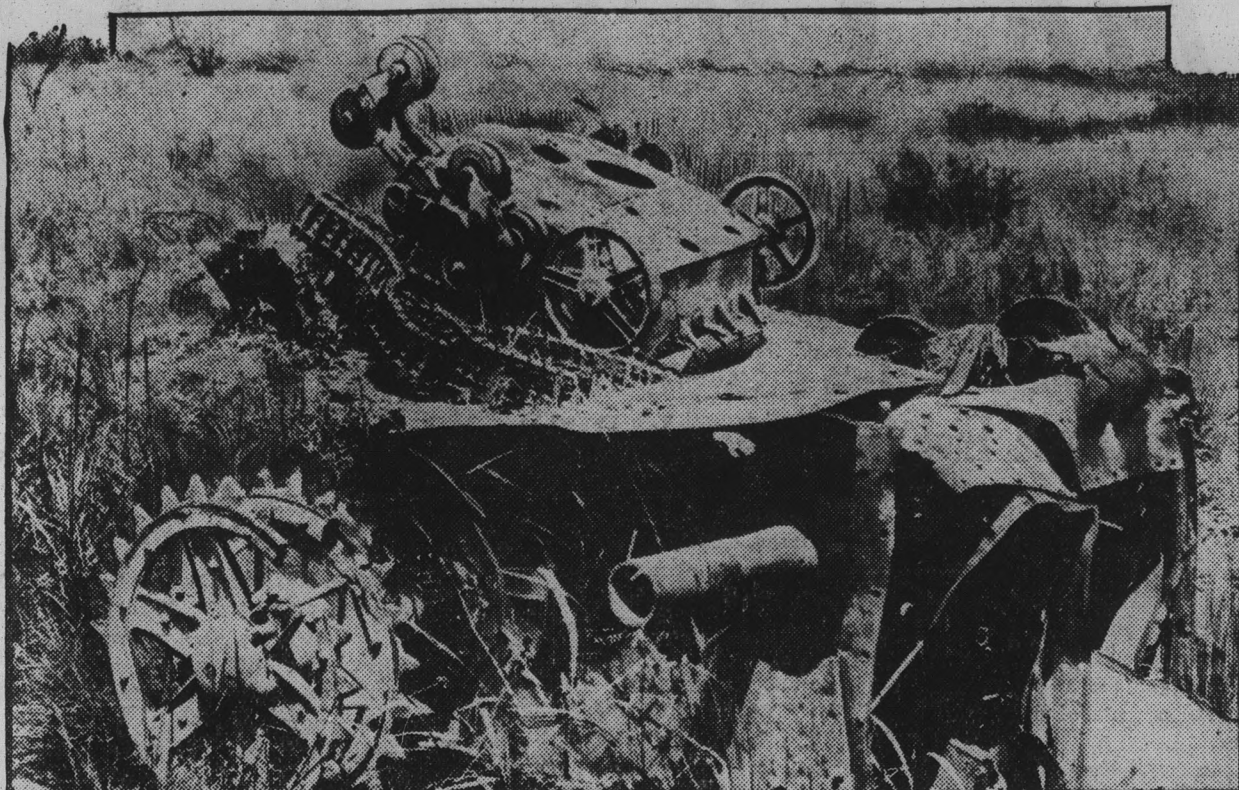

His indictment of Roehm and the circle of pervers that surrounded him was terrific in its details and convincing to most of his countrymen.

Just before the delivery of his address, Hitler and his government were notified by Great Britain and Italy that they approved the eastern European security pact that France is fostering. These would include Russia, Poland, the Baltic states and Czechoslovakia, and unless Germany also signed up the result would be the forging of an iron band around the reich.

Hitler alluded to this plan in defiant language. He said:

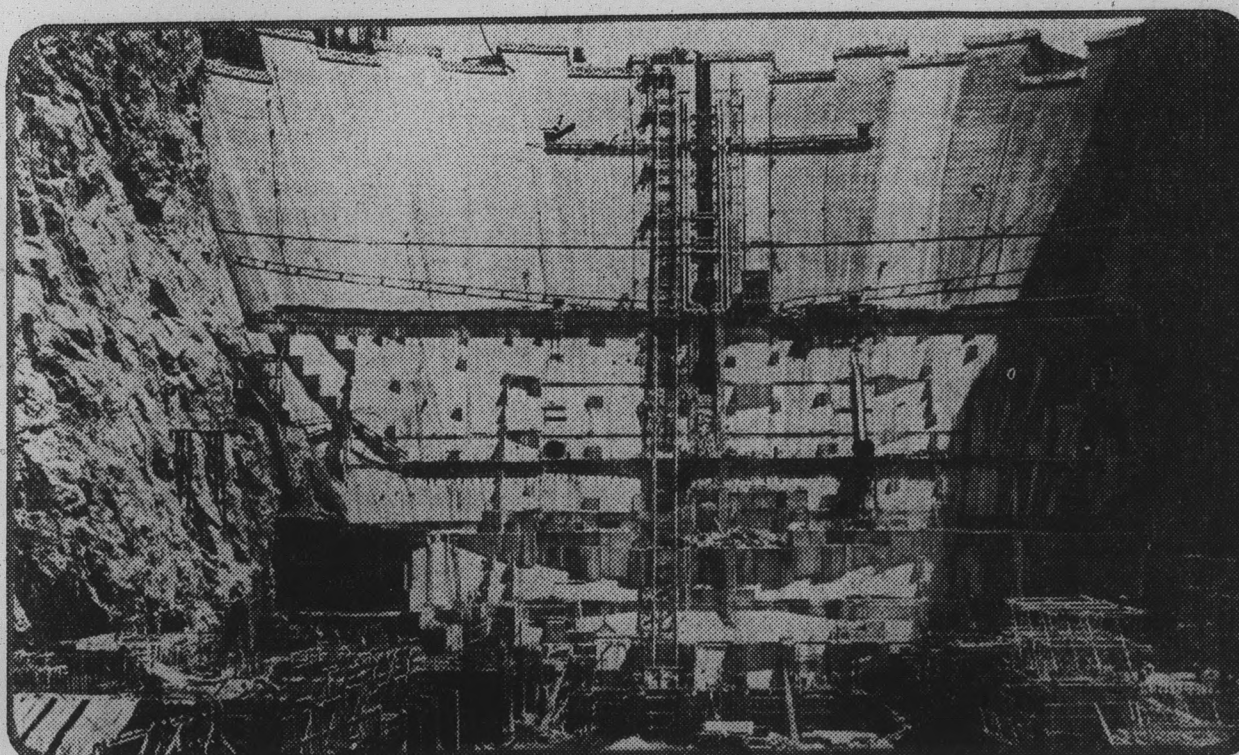

"If our trade balance, through economic barriers in foreign markets or through political boycott, becomes a passive one, we shall, through our own ability and thanks to the genius of our inventors and chemists, find ways of making ourselves independent of those raw materials which we ourselves are in a position to manufacture or find substitutes for."

One More German Pocket Battleship

Germany now has three of the "pocket battleships" that she devised to get around the naval limitations imposed by the Versailles treaty. The third, named Admiral Graf Spee, is here seen sliding down the ways at Wilhelmshaven.

Crimes in Air to Be Curbed

Aroused by reports that smuggling by air is growing, Scotland Yard and the British customs officials are collaborating in plans to stop it. It also is planned to discourage all attempts at air banditry. One method proposed for this is to apply character tests before granting pilots' licenses.

Washington.—The end of June statements of all of the banks of the country are now a matter of record and Bank Deposits Increase surprisingly, nearly all of the individual banks have shown increases in deposits and resources over a year ago. A couple of the largest banks in New York showed such astounding increases in deposits as $100,000,000, compared with June, 1933. But irrespective of the increase in deposits—that is, the money actually in possession of the banks—almost none of them disclosed any increase in the total loans now outstanding. Indeed, the rule was a decline from June 30, 1933.

Banking authorities in the government and outside tell me these figures on deposits and resources clearly indicate an improvement in the general banking situation. The Federal Reserve board in its latest review of conditions declared the banking structure was on a much firmer foundation. Yet, the fact that the banks have not made loans is being seized upon by a certain segment of politicians and alleged economists as proof that the banks are not doing their part. From very high quarters in the administration we hear intermittent yelps that the banks are not co-operating and are not attempting to loan money. This condition, as they construe it, is being used as the excuse for the existence of numerous of the government loaning agencies and for other activities under the New Deal that result in getting money out into the country.

The circumstances in the decline of bank loans, however, is to my mind not such as the critics of the banks claim. It must be remembered first of all that bankers, when they make loans, are putting out money belonging to you and to other depositors. They must be reasonably sure of getting it back, even though we do have now the Federal Deposit Insurance corporation that is supposed to prevent losses for the depositors. Bankers, therefore, are willing to make loans of the vast sums of idle cash their banks hold if they can only find someone who will put up security guaranteeing a return of the borrowed funds.

While some of the critics of the bankers have been continuing their attacks, I note statements from the Public Works administration, from the Reconstruction Finance corporation, from the Home Owners' Loan corporation, and the Farm Credit administration, among others, which show very clearly that the government or its agencies is unwilling to make loans unless it can foresee a reasonable chance for repayment. Just the other day, the Public Works administration withdrew an allocation of some $6,877,000 for construction of a bridge in Chicago because, according to Public Works Administrator Ickes, the political subdivision of that city having jurisdiction was unable to provide a guarantee of repayment of that loan. Every day local units of the Home Owners' Loan corporation are turning down applications by home owners who seek government money through mortgages on their property to aid them in whatever distress they find themselves. The same statement may be made respecting loans by the Reconstruction Finance corporation in its dealings with industry.

Lately the various Federal Reserve banks issued a weekly statement of their operations, and only three of the twelve reserve institutions reported having made loans to industry.

Why Borrowers Are Few I have inquired in numerous quarters for reasons why borrowers were so few. The consensus given me by men who should know, is that there are two distinct reasons for the small amount of loans being made by banks and, of course, the same reasons apply in the case of government loans, except that the government has been known to put out money in places from which it probably never will be returned. One of the reasons mentioned was that individuals and firms who most need money have nothing but their own signed obligations to put up as a guarantee. Obviously, if an individual or a corporation has no resources, the note of that individual or that corporation is of little value, however honest and well intentioned the borrower may be.

The second reason, and one that is quite as important, is the lack of confidence which business men tell me exists to a large extent in commerce and industry. Whatever is the basis for this lack of confidence is not a matter of concern in this discussion, but its existence seem to me to be a matter of the gravest importance. Whether taxpayers are afraid of the burden in levies which they can foresee, is the reason for their hesitancy, is not now wholly apparent. Many observers are convinced it is an influential factor. There is also the question which one hears so often asked: Where and how far does the New Deal intend to go in socialization and reform? It seems to be obvious that each of these, and perhaps others, are factors standing in the way of a sound expansion of business under the recovery plan.

In the meantime, the federal government is going ahead with its program to spend our way out of the depression. Here is one item to show what is happening.

This road building has resulted in the construction of enough miles—more than 22,000—of new highway almost to encircle the earth. This money was voted by congress in the last session as a means of creating work. Proponents of the appropriation, and administration authorities, hold that the $400,000,000 earmarked for road building would provide thousands of new jobs. Bureau of public roads figures indicate that this has been the result, but I find many observers who are wondering whether the amount of money that has been paid to labor for highway construction has been a proper proportionate part of the total set aside, when the purpose was solely the making of jobs.

Total figures by the public roads office show that 6,330 miles were completed and in use on July 1 of this year and that 14,000 miles were under construction, with the probability that they will be in use by the end of 1934. Contracts have been awarded, the bureau has said, for the construction of about 1,900 miles more, and work on this portion will be under way in the late summer.

It used to be assumed that when economic conditions were below par, many owners of automobiles would discontinue their machines until they were better situated financially. Such, however, seems not to have been the case in the last year. Automobile registrations, while they declined in 1933, continued to remain at an unusually high figure as compared with recent years. Official statistics show that 23,872,000 motor vehicles were in use last year. This is only 1 per cent below 1932. The decline from 1931 to 1932 was larger, but the point is, according to officials, that the decline was very small. The authorities insist that the reduction in total motor vehicles in use as compared with 1932 should be considered as hardly noticeable when the whole country and the whole number of motor vehicles is considered.

Still Use Their Cars Although I have not the official statistics concerning the sales of new cars last year, responsible sources inform me that this business was very much improved and they add also that the sales for 1934 in the first six months have been exceptionally high. This would indicate that a great many individuals have found money, in some way or another, which they could spare for a new automobile.

Washington observers lately have noticed an increasing tendency among conservatives throughout the country, whether Democratic or Republican, to align themselves under one banner. The movement as yet is much in the embryo, but I am told by various observers who are acquainted with political trends that the alignment is taking a rather definite shape. Some months ago I reported in these columns the belief of many political leaders that Mr. Roosevelt, as President, was definitely engaged in the formation of a Roosevelt party that would adhere strictly to liberal standards. Assignments which the President has made, the legislation which he has proposed, and his general attitude on social matters coupled with an absolute disregard of old-time Democratic principles, has laid the groundwork for the regrouping of voters under a liberal and conservative alignment. It is to be noted in this connection that Mr. Roosevelt is continuing to expand his liberal doctrines under the guidance of some of the political leaders heretofore held to be radical members of the two old parties.

Another factor and influence that is noted now to be at work is the gradual concentration of business interests on the conservative side of political questions under the New Deal. Washington has heard lately of efforts being made which would result in the molding of business interests, or the spokesmen thereof, into a compact organization as a means of combating policies of the New Deal regarded by business leaders as radical in character.

It is too early to attempt a forecast as to the scope of this move. Nevertheless, it is quite apparent that a concentration of this strength is under way. Not only will these men and interests oppose expansion of such policies as NRA and the AAA but they are organizing to fight the ever-increasing burden of taxation and to oppose extension of government in business.

It is a matter of record, of course, that the tendency of government policies in the United States since the World war has been steadily to the left. Conservatives have been unable thus far to check this trend, largely because the conservative element never has stood together. It is important and significant, therefore, that for the first time we are observing the development of a conservative organization in this country which has the avowed purpose of turning the American government back somewhat to the right and, as the leaders describe it, back again to the Constitution as it was originally drawn.

BEDTIME STORY FOR CHILDREN

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

PETER FINDS VEERY

PETER RABBIT had spent a quiet day in the dear old Brier Patch. As evening approached he decided to go back to hear Melody the Wood Thrush sing again. Just as he drew near the Green Forest he heard from the direction of the Laughing Brook a song which caused him to change his mind and sent him hurrying in that direction. It was a very different song from that of Melody, yet if he had never heard it before Peter would have known that such a song could come from no throat except that of a member of the Thrush family.

Veery Came Out From Under Some Ferns to Greet Peter.

"Wheen!" Then, seeing that it was no one of whom he need be afraid, Veery came out from under some ferns to greet Peter. He was smaller than his cousin Melody, being about one-fourth smaller than Welcome Robin. He wore a brown coat, but it was not as bright as that of Melody. His breast was somewhat faintly spotted with brown, and below he was white. His sides were grayish white and not spotted like Melody's sides.

"I heard you singing, and I just had to come over to see you," cried Peter. "I hope you like my song," said Veery. "I love to sing just at this hour, and I love to think that other people like to hear me."

"They do," declared Peter most decidedly. "I can't imagine how anybody could fail to like to hear you. I came way over here just to sit a while and listen. Won't you sing some more for me, Veery?"

"Certainly," replied Veery. "I wouldn't feel that I was going to bed right if I didn't sing until dark. The only way I can express my happiness and love of the Green Forest and the joy of just being back here at home is by singing."

Veery slipped out of sight and most at once his bell-like notes began to ring through the Green Forest. Peter sat right where he was, content to just listen and feel within himself the joy of being alive and happy in the beautiful spring season which Veery was expressing so wonderfully.

Finally from deep in the Green Forest sounded the hunting call of Hooty the Owl. Veery's song stopped. "Good-night, Peter," he called softly.

QUESTION BOX

By ED WYNN . . .
The Perfect Fool

Dear Mr. Wynn:

I bought some stock in the "Banana Oil Company." I can't find anything in the papers about it. Can you tell me if the stock has gone up?

Yours truly,

N. VESTOR.

Answer—It sure has. It went up with the company.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

I am now forty-two years of age and still unmarried. I can't seem to get a husband. Every Leap Year I propose to seven or eight men, but none of them will even listen. What, oh what, shall I do to get a husband?

Sincerely,

A. SPINSTER.

Answer—Just find a man who is sick on the flat of his back and it's a cinch.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

My wife is either careless or absent-minded. Every time she goes out of the house she has her stockings on the wrong side. How can I cure her of wearing her stockings inside out?

Yours truly,

M. POSSIBLE.

Answer—The next time you see your wife with her stockings wrong side out, turn the hose on her.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

I am a girl twenty-three years of age, and have been going with a fellow for about five weeks. He is not very bright, but I think I like him just the same. He proposed to me last night, and just to kid him I said I would marry him if he could tell me the difference between myself and a cow. Shall I marry him anyhow?

Yours truly,

N. LOVE.

Answer—If he can't tell you the difference between yourself and a cow, you better let him marry a cow.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

I understand the lightweight championship is in dispute. Can you tell me who are the two nearest contenders for the lightweight championship?

Truly yours,

U. KNOIT.

Answer—Just now, it is a toss-up between the "ice man" and the "coal man."

THROUGH A Woman's Eyes

PRINCE EDWARD island, a province of 88,000 inhabitants, has had only one divorce in almost 400 years. It is only 24 hours by train from Boston, and the inhabitants have adopted practically all American habits—except divorce. That is, they read American magazines and newspapers, buy American goods, see American motion pictures. The island is a popular American tourist haunt and it is said that practically all its families have relatives and friends in the United States. They are prosperous, the law admits of divorce, and only a percentage of the population have religious prohibitions against it. How then, or rather why, has this community escaped the well-known virus that so cuts into our marriage records?

William S. Dutton has quoted the governor of Prince Edward island as giving the explanation. He says:

A PRAYER IN HARVEST TIME

By ANNE CAMPBELL

LORD, breathe upon thy meadows
Thy cool and tranquil breath.
The cornfields need the silver
Of rain to stay their death.
The fields are parched and swooning
Beneath the sun's fierce beat.
The woodland green is fading,
Scorched by the noonday heat.

Lord, fan the clover blossoms
That faint beneath the sun,
And save the climbing roses—
They wilt when night is done.
Set clouds above my pathway
Where now the hot sun stings,
And spread above the highway
The shadow of thy wings.

Lord, send a cool breeze blowing
Across the city street,
And on the dusty roadways
Where town and country meet.
Send down thy rain to bless us—
And lift thy sacred hand
To comfort with thy blessing
A thirsty, weary land.

make them regard marriage as a job to fall in which is a disgrace and a wrong, then—borrowing from the vernacular—it is "all to the good." But the matter is not always so simple. The people and the marriages affected would not come under one head. Mania for freedom is dangerous, the other extreme of suppression is no more desirable. Page Solomon.

J. H. JOHNSON HI-JACKS HIS DEPUTIES AGAIN

(From the Broom)

When we stated last year that J. H. Johnson was robbing his deputies he went to the District Attorney and swore out a complaint of criminal libel against us. We refused to withdraw our charge, went to trial and proved by Johnson himself and his own witnesses which he put on the stand against us, that he was robbing his deputies by using the authority of his position to collect political campaign contributions from them. The jury found us not guilty of libel after they had heard the truth revealed by the witnesses.

A few months ago we sounded another warning to Johnson that he might land in San Quentin if he does not stop collecting monies from his deputies for political purposes.

Now we are going to show that monies for political purposes were collected just at the time we sounded the warning.

Last Wednesday night a former deputy assessor had left a message at our residence that he had some information. We called him up and made a date for Friday afternoon. His name is E. V. White, of 3120 Freeman street, Ocean Beach.

"What can I do for you, Mr. White?"

"I want you to get my story as it took place."

"Are you talking for publication?"

"Yes, you may publish it, Mr. de Aryan."

"All right, shoot."

"During January, this year, George Sherlock came to me and asked me to contribute $10 for the Tax Reduction League. You know that is the League of James Hervey Johnson that works to keep him in office. He is president. So I told Sherlock that I will give him $10 for Mr. Johnson's campaign and he may collect after pay day. In the meantime a friend heard about my promise and told me not to pay anything, but I figured that my job was worth $10 to me, said so, and when Sherlock came around to collect I gave him the money saying that I was willing to help Johnson's coming campaign for assessor since my understanding was that the money, though nominally collected for the Tax Reduction League, was building up Johnson's campaign fund. The League was to work to re-elect him."

"Did they come to get more contributions later? I was told that the collections were made monthly."

"No, they didn't collect from me because they fired me shortly after they got my money. I think you're right that they were taking up monthly collections because my receipt reads that way." And he handed us his receipt.

This is what it shows:

$10.00 Feb. 6, 1934 Received from Geo. H. Sherlock,
Ten and no-100 Dollars Feb. contribution to Tax Reduction
League from E. V. White 557

(Signed) Elmer G. Johnson, Secy.-Treas.

"So you paid the money to Sherlock and he turned it over to Elmer Johnson. I wonder whether the books of the Tax Reduction League show how much they took in since, and from whom. Would the boys talk under oath?"

"I could not tell you that, but the District Attorney could easily get at the matter if he is interested. They fired me after they took my February contribution."

"They took your money first and kicked you out afterwards, while you had paid because you wanted to hold your job?"

"Yes."

The Federal Housing Administration if carried out as contemplated, will be of far-reaching benefit to the unemployed, since it is estimated that 5,000,000 Americans will be given jobs. This ought to be music with a melodious note to the idle and disheartened Administrator Moffett is calling upon the people to be patient, for the time is approaching when further aid will be supplied to enable thousands to secure home of their own.

Hoover Dam, the most colossal engineering feat known in history, has a near rival, known as the Gibraltar Tunnel, which is a plan to bore thru rock under water connecting Europe with Africa in a gigantic highway passage. It is considered most difficult undertaking because the maximum depth of the sea is more than 1000 feet while the distance from shore to shore is about six and a quarter miles. The creative mind of man is undaunted, also without limitation for achieving.

San Diego is busy with building plans for one of the most gigantic world's fairs ever put over. It already has set the attendance at five million people. Probably no greater benefit could come to the Golden State than to be host for this immense company of visitors. The enterprise is big in name as well—The California Pacific Exposition, and San Diego willingly submits to the choice, for without selfishness, the entire west is to pull for its success. The promotion budget of $500,000 is being rapidly subscribed and work is already under way, which is necessary, as it is planned to open in June, 1935 and run thru to March, 1936. Balboa Park, with its beautiful natural setting will be the center of the great attraction.

"Sweet are the uses of adversity," says Shakespeare; but it takes a lot of hard teaching to make the average person believe it. Too many are inclined to believe that they are the "under dog," and that there is no possible escape from the pits of despair and misfortune. Most of us make our own troubles. We first lose our mental equilibrium, and the rest follows. To lose all and still be rich is hard to realize, but possible to be. Though the horrors of poverty disturb us by taking our wealth there is a wealth left which can give more happiness than a million dollars. Good health, honest citizenship and a mental capacity for enjoying life can never be retrieved by any earthly wealth. Property loss counts little compared with character. Indeed, one may feel rich when his wealth does not depend upon business conditions or market reports.

SAN DIEGO WRESTLING FANS ENJOY AMERICA'S FINEST

Altho San Diego has a small population compared to New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Chicago and other large wrestling centers, the fans of this community are being given the greatest wrestling matches to be held anywhere. Even Los Angeles, which for years was considered the center of California wrestling, is being outdone by San Diego's Coliseum.

Attendance during the last six weeks have warranted bringing these matches here, according to Linn Platner, local wrestling promoter. More than 20,000 fans have crowded the arenas turnstiles since the middle of June.

To reward the public for their support, the greatest mat stars of the world have been matched for their entertainment. Matches that crowded the big arena to capacity were Sammy Stein—Joe Savoldi match which was billed for last February, falling thru when Savoldi failed to appear. Platner took his grievances regarding the match before the State Athletic Commission and was promptly informed that unless Savoldi went thru with his match he would be suspended in the United States. Savoldi in turn notified the Coliseum that he was ready to go thru with his match and strongly denied running out on the previous match Savoldi claimed that he missed an airplane connection in Chicago which prevented his arrival. Savoldi and Stein are both flying tackle experts.

A future showing here of Jim Londos, world's heavyweight champion wrestler, will also play to a packed house. There are a lot of good young wrestlers who would like a crack at this title, and many whom critics claim have a good chance to beat the Greek. Apparently San Diego will hold the wrestling spotlight for the next few weeks.

ORPHEUM NOW SHOWING HAPPY LANDINGS

"Happy Landings," a picture of the air service section of the United States border patrol comes to the screen of the Orpheum, August 9th, according to an announcement by Harry L. Hartman. The picture will have a three day run at the local playhouse.

Filled with action, the story moves like a hurricane thru a series of interesting air thrills. Entwined in the theme is a delicate romance with Jacqueline Wells and Ray Walker taking the leading roles.

With the performance the Orpheum will return to its former policy of six headline acts of vaudeville and Ted Mack as master of ceremonies. In the top spot on the stage program will be Arlene Frances, featured comedian of the Happy Go Lucky hour. Also on the stage will be Bert and Kerr, comedy team in "Nonsensical Minutes"; the Griffith dance team; Harry Cudy, uke player from the south; and two other acts, in addition to novelties by Ted Mack and his band.

A news reel, cartoon and two reels of comedy will complete the program.

For the program starting Sunday, Hartman has announced a first run special from a major studio together with an entirely novel stage presentation by Ted Mack and his band and six headline acts of vaudeville.

Killers of Boat Operator Traced and Caught

This is another of the series of articles by Richard W. Chadwick, telling for the first time the inside story of some of San Diego's most unusual and interesting crimes. Mr. Chadwick is in a splendid position to relate these stories, because in each one, his was the guiding hand which led to the solution. They are told simply and to the point; much as the man himself works. He believes, as do many others, that it is this type of experience and training which amply fit him for the office of Sheriff.

In May of the year 1921, Chadwick was busily engaged investigating the brutal beating of one of the shore boat operators plying a boat to some of the vessels in the harbor. The man, unconscious, brutally beaten and in a critical condition had been robbed and left to die in the bottom of his drifting boat which was floating unguided in the bay when found.

So far, Chadwick had worked many weary hours on this case, but had only arrived at one conclusion. His attention was centered on three of the navy boats served by the attacked man.

On the morning of May 6, a man came to police headquarters to report that his brother was missing. In taking the report the desk lieutenant noted that the missing man was also a shore boat operator; just then the phone rang and an excited voice blurted out that the badly beaten body of a man had been found in a shore boat, floating unguided under the west Santa Fe wharf. The brother of the missing man, pale as he heard the information, but gathered himself together enough to accompany officers to the place described. A pitiful scene was enacted when the man gazed upon the horribly mutilated body and recognized his missing brother.

Having been working for some time on the former shore boat attack case, Chadwick was fortunately in possession of certain information and had eliminated certain angles which would save time on the present case so he immediately assumed charge of the case. The murdered man had been operating a boat which was serving the navy, three boats as the boat of the man previously attacked. The murdered man had been seen at midnight before, pulling away from the wharf for one of the boats he served; since then he had never been seen alive. Chadwick conceived the idea that a check of the cheaper hotels of the downtown area might lead to some clue as to the late arrivals, and from them he might gain some hint as to who the passengers on the fatal boat trip might have been.

In one of the hotels so checked, he found that two men had arrived and registered at about one o'clock the morning of the murder. From the maid who cleaned the room after they had departed, he learned that a bloody towel and a blood stained pair of dungarees had been left. He took the names from the register and from the clerk he got an excellent description of the men. The clerk remembered also that in their conversation with each other one of them had said "Well, when they're dead, they're a long time dead." Feeling sure that the men were members of the navy, Chadwick set about finding out how they had returned to their ship, and what ship they belonged to by canvassing all the shore boats with the descriptions he had obtained. From an operator at the foot of 26th street, he learned that two men answering the descriptions had gone to a certain boat early that morning. Chadwick went out to the boat named, there as he had suspected he found that the names taken from the register were fictitious, but luckily he also found that two men answering the descriptions were actually members of the crew and now on board. Feeling that he could not successfully question the men on board ship, Chadwick obtained permission to have them brought ashore for that purpose. Before he returned to shore himself, he had learned that although the suspected men had been out of funds for some time before the murder they had only that morning "flushed" quite a roll. Among the possessions of the men he also had found a blood stained pair of shoes.

At police headquarters, when confronted with the incriminating evidence, the men both denied any participation in the affair, and even when their stories as to their movements the night of the murder were checked and found to be false they still were adamant. They were taken to a cell in the jail where a dictograph had been cleverly hidden; for a short time they were silent, then they started asking each other how much the other had told, and discussed their chances of avoiding detection for their part in the crime.

Taken immediately upstairs for questioning again and faced with records of this conversation, one of the pair confessed. The other when told that his partner had weakened also broke down.

Before the date of their trial, however, both denied their confessions and Chadwick was forced to prove his case against them step by step. That he was successful in doing this is attested by the fact that a jury found both guilty of murder and they were sentenced to the penitentiary for life.

Next week's story covers a little known phase of crime, be sure to read it.

RALPH W. WALLACE

LEGISLATIVE CANDIDATE HAS INTEREST IN BEACHES

Mission Bay park and our beaches will have a true friend in the next legislature if Ralph W. Wallace is elected our assemblyman. Since the legislature is still partisan Wallace must first be nominated by the Republicans in the primary, August 28, in order to run in the November general election, and therefore his friends in Ocean Beach are urging all voters who are registered Republican to be sure to cast their vote for him in the primary.

Wallace is enthusiastic about the development of Mission Beach park and the beaches and will give us his wholehearted support in their future development. He favors limiting taxes on property to $1 on each $100 valuation and exempting from taxation the first $1,000.00 valuation on homes occupied by owners. In addition, he favors exempting inexpensive automobiles from being seized by creditors for debt since lack of transportation prevents a man from earning a living for his family and earning sufficient money to pay off the debt. If we require any state legislation in building our new pier we can count on Wallace to obtain it for us.

Wallace's program is ideal for Ocean Beach and it is expected that he will receive a heavy vote here. Mr. and Mrs. Fred W. Wallace, 4914 Cape May, are in charge of their brother's campaign in Ocean Beach and will welcome the assistance of other local citizens.

TED O'LOUGHLIN

Young Artist Who Draws Popular Comic Strip, "Finney of the Force."

LOSS OF JOB GOOD LUCK FOR ARTIST WHO DRAWS "FINNEY OF THE FORCE"

Ted O'Loughlin, who draws the comic strip, "Finney of the Force", which readers of this paper enjoy so much every week, might be a railroad man today instead of the widely known artist that he is, had it not been for the fact that when he was holding down a job as a way-bill clerk in the freight department of the Pennsylvania railroad in Philadelphia, his boss' likeness in grotesque caricature made its appearance on too many way-bills. Within a year the budding artist found his career as a railroad man cut short and he was precipitated into the work for which his later success proved he was particularly fitted.

Now only thirty years of age, Mr. O'Loughlin had quite an extensive experience, in various lines of endeavor even before his brief tenure of service with the Pennsylvania railroad.

Christened "Edward A. J.", his nickname was conferred by a stuttering aunt who could not say "Ed". Like many other successful men, he began his business career as a newsboy. Later, during the summer vacations, he served successively as office boy, a printer's devil and a jack-of-all-trades. The summer of 1918 found him working in a clothing mill, but this did not last long, for by August of the same year he was in the "world's greatest wartime shipyard"—Hog Island—a passer-boy, being the medium by which red-hot rivets were passed from the heater to the holder-on.

At the death of his father in 1919, the future artist left high school and became the "breadwinner" of the family as a telegraph messenger boy. From this he advanced to the railroad job from which he was to be soon separated because of the itch to caricature, which he could not suppress.

Six months after he was "bumped" in the language of railroad workers, he embarked upon his life work as a newspaper man and artist. He was employed at different times on most of the dailies of Philadelphia and Camden, N. J., making layouts, retouching and doing sports cartoons. From this it was but a step to the comic strip field and he has made a name for himself among the younger cartoonists of the country through his portrayal of "Finney of the Force."

With these little sidelights on the career of the man who gives you the enjoyable weekly visits from "Finney" you will be more interested than ever, we know, in watching for the further adventures of the genial officer as they appear in this paper, and in telling your friends about "Finney" and the man who draws him.

On hot, sultry days, when food lacks its usual appeal, tempt your jaded palate with either of these two cool sandwiches. Mix chopped Brazil nuts with cream cheese and spread on white, whole wheat or graham bread. Sprinkle lightly with salt. If the salt does not appeal, try the Amazon sandwich, which utilizes chopped Brazils in cream cheese, plus a spoonful of tart jelly to top off the spread. These large and delicious nuts can be split, sliced, shredded and chopped, and either raw or roasted are suited for flavoring many delicious sandwich spreads.

THE THEOSOPHICAL SOCIETY: POINT LOMA

The speaker at the forum-lecture in the Temple of Peace last Sunday was W. Emmett Small, Jr., and his subject The Ladder of Life. The speaker stressed the Theosophical teachings that the Universe is filled full of living entities, each and all evolving, and all conscious according to the conditions of the plane to which it belonged. These myriads upon myriads of entities are grouped in hierarchies; that is to say, any collection of entities to the number of ten, which from a unity, in which the entities are divided into varying grades or steps of evolution, under the direction, or guidance of a supreme authority, the hierarchy. This is the ladder of life which extends infinitely in directions superior to man in his present state of evolution and in like case, infinitely in directions inferior to the state of man. It is through a study of this doctrine that we learn that Universal Brotherhood is a fact in nature.

Miss Helen Savage will speak on Sunday on "Cyclical Opportunities" at 3 o'clock. There will be music before the lecture and at its conclusion Miss Savage will be assisted in answering questions by Miss Florence Collisson, Orange Clark, and Prof. C. M. Savage. All are welcome.

SYNOPSIS

At the close of the Mexican war, Robin Kershaw, with his bride, rode into northeastern California. Here he found an ideal valley for cattle raising. They christened it Eden Valley. Below Eden Valley is a less valuable tract which Kershaw's wife names Forlorn Valley. Joel Hensley settles in the lower half of the valley. There is bad blood over fences and water. Kershaw kills Hensley and the blood-feud is on. By 1917, Rance Kershaw, his son Owen, and daughter Lorry are all that remains of one clan. Nate Tichenor is the sole survivor on the Hensley side. He goes to help Lorry in her car and finds her father has died of heart disease. Elias Babson, banker, schemes to control the irrigation and hydro-electric possibilities of Eden Valley. Nate and Owen, Lorry's brother, met in France just before Owen was killed, and Nate promised that if he survived Owen he would look after Lorry as a brother might do. With money advanced by Nate, Lorry clears up her indebtedness to Babson. Nate finds he is falling in love with Lorry. Babson discovers Nate is behind a rival power project. Nate tells Lorry he loves her. She admits she loves him, and they become engaged. Babson orders Joe Brainerd, editor of the local paper, to attack Nate as an enemy of the people. This Brainerd refuses to do. Nate comes to Brainerd's rescue financially. The editor celebrates by punching Babson's head.

"Now, if this is done the value of our ranches will be very much depreciated, because we will be denied the natural irrigation of a great many thousand acres of rich meadow lands each spring. The constitution of the United States guarantees its citizens against seizure and appropriation of their property without due process of law and adequate compensation. Hence, any state law that contravenes that right is unconstitutional.

"When the federal government issued patents to homesteaders in Eden Valley it did not except the water right from the land right. In presuming to appropriate our riparian rights or any portion of them for the benefit of a distant and non-riparian owner, the state of California is assuming a right it does not legally possess.

"Now, I'm not going to start a bitter lawsuit with the Forlorn Valley Irrigation district. I shall merely enter a formal protest—and when I use the first person singular I mean Miss Kershaw and the Bar H Land and Cattle company. Then I shall sit quietly by and watch those idiots bond their lands, market the bonds, and spend the money to get a diversion dam and dig miles and miles of main canals and laterals. Then, just as they are about to open their floodgates I shall, upon affidavit that the district's action is about to work great hardship and damage upon me, be granted a temporary injunction by the superior court restraining the district from using the water, and ordering it to show cause, within ten days, why such temporary injunction should not be made permanent. The case will then be tried on its merits, and I shall probably lose in the superior court, because the judge will refrain from questioning the constitutionality of the state law. I shall appeal and I shall win, and when I have won, the only legal salvation for Forlorn Valley will be to buy Eden Valley from us, either at private treaty or via the condemnation-suit route. If it wants our water it must buy our lands—and a jury will set the price."

"He hath taken down the mighty from their seat and hath exalted them of low degree," Gagan quoted humorously. "You appear to be something of a financier."

"Just contemplate Forlorn Valley, the money derived from the sale of the bonds all spent on a diversion dam, main canal, floodgates, laterals, engineering fees, salaries, and so forth, suddenly discovering that after all it cannot get the water—that it's all dressed up with no place to go. While they dwell in blissful ignorance of the cataclysm they curse and hate and deride Miss Kershaw and me for protecting our vested rights; when the blow falls—"

"There will be stark drama and tragedy in that, not comedy, Mr. Tichenor."

"I dare say. . . . Well, now that I have had my own ideas on the legality of my position confirmed by such eminent water counsel as yourself, it would seem that all I can do is sit calmly by and watch Forlorn Valley ruin itself."

"But surely, Mr. Tichenor," Gagan protested, "you will take some measures to warn these people before they embark on such a ruinous enterprise."

"Notwithstanding the fact that it would be very bad business for me to do that, I shall do it. It will be a case of love's labor lost, however. The people will not believe me; they are following a false leader and blindly loyal to him. . . . Well, here's your check for legal services to date. Something tells me I shall be retaining your services at a later date."

Returning home, Nate Tichenor was met at the railroad depot in Gold Run by his chauffeur with the car. Passing through Valley Center en route to Eden Valley he saw some men skidding a limotype into a vacant store in the Babson block; above the door a new sign informed the world that presently the Forlorn Valley Citizen would here go to press.

Certainly Babson was losing no time moving into action. Nor was Joe Brainerd, as Nate discovered when he paused at the office of the Register, hoping to glean news of interest that might have occurred during his four days' absence. He found Brainerd writing an editorial cordially welcoming his competitor into the field.

"Going to press tomorrow with a two-page issue, Nate," he announced. "Practically all of my local advertising has been withdrawn."

"Why not run the canceled ads just the same, Joe? If I were you I would decline to let Babson see how badly he has hurt me. He may think his slaves have not obeyed orders and start a fight with them in consequence. If anybody cancels his subscription continue sending him the paper as usual. I'll take care of your deficit. When I'm fighting a bitter fight it's against my religion to cry out or admit I'm hurt."

Brainerd grinned, for this was the sort of fight he loved to wage, if he could afford it. "I'm running another front-page editorial on the water question, Nate. Forlorn Valley has to have the water and if it cannot get it from the Mountain Valley Power company it must tap the creek up in the Handle. I'm living up to our agreement, boy, and making the fight for my subscribers."

"You'd be a traitor not to."

"What did your lawyer say?"

Nate related in detail his conversation with Gagan. "Perhaps," Brainerd suggested, "I'd do well to write a new editorial pointing out to the people the possibility of failure of the plan upon which, led by Babson, they are about to embark. What do the poor devils know about it? Only what Babson tells them."

"That's a splendid idea, Joe. The people will then have an opportunity to read your editorial and digest it."

Rube Tenney Used the Ramrod.

before attending the mass meeting. Consequently they will be more favorably inclined toward the proposition I shall have to make them at that meeting. And when the editorial has been written and set up, pull a proof, and send it over to Babson. It may give him food for reflection."

Within two hours Brainerd sent his devil over to the bank with the proof and a note from Brainerd to the effect that he was running the editorial in his next issue and inviting comment. After reading the editorial Babson passed it to Henry Rookby for the latter's reaction.

"He asks for my comment, Henry. Well, I'll oblige him." And Babson wrote in red crayon across the proof: "When Forlorn Valley has its own reservoir filled, you and Tichenor have my permission to jump into it and drown yourselves, and greatly oblige, yours, etc., S. Babson."

"Shoot 'em in the foot," Mr. Rookby urged wittily.

When the bank's messenger took the proof and Babson's message back to Joe Brainerd, that astute individual signed and, after the fashion of newspaper men, who always save the written expressions of opinion of their enemies, locked it up in his safe!

CHAPTER X

Darby, Nate Tichenor's chauffeur, was enjoying to the fullest his master's visit to Eden Valley. Distinctly a New York product, Darby had heard there was considerable space west of the Hudson river, but he had not been prepared to admit that the country was as wide-open as he had found it. Darby had enjoyed the branding, but most of all he had enjoyed the idleness of his job.

Miss Kershaw had been very kind to Darby, too, in that she had sent him down an old, safe saddle horse for the gloomy but efficient Joseph.

Also, she had sent a horse down for the gloomy but efficient Joseph. But unfortunately she sent a stock-saddle with him, and as Joseph had never ridden anything but an English saddle, his conservatism forbade that he should try anything new. He compromised, therefore, by taking long walks, after the fashion of his kind, shooting blue-jays and hawks, and fishing. Like Darby, he rejoiced because his master required but little service from him.

Before leaving for San Francisco, however, the master had given the task of posting "No Shooting, Fishing or Trespassing" notices from the gate at the entrance to Eden Valley to the farthest limit of the Kershaw ranch. This task pleased both servants, particularly Joseph, who possessed a truly Britannc passion for privacy and the protection of private shooting and fishing preserves from alien invasion. The notices once up, therefore, Joseph saw his duty plainly before him. With much misgiving, therefore, he climbed into the stock-saddle on the horse Lorry Kershaw had sent him, slung a .22 calibre rifle in a scabbard and set forth to apprehend poachers, a poacher being considered by Joseph as absolutely the lowest form of human life.

For two days he ambled through the pleasant valley, enjoying the solitude.

The day Tichenor came home from San Francisco Darby seized upon his absence to go fishing, while Joseph saddled his horse and set forth again on his delightful journeying, his heart still beating high with the hope of finding a poacher. And late in the afternoon, as the shadows were growing long in Eden Valley and Joseph was reminded that he must return home soon and prepare dinner for his master, who had informed him he would dine at home that night, he discovered a poacher.

He had ridden into a thick grove of yellow pines when, happening to glance up the side of the ridge that separated Eden Valley from Forlorn Valley, he saw a man descending through the buckbrush and laurel. Through his master's binoculars the excellent Joseph made appraisal and discovered the man carried a rifle.

The man could really have found more open going, yet he preferred to stick to the tall brush, nor did he advance confidently as an honest man should. Arriving at last at the foot of the ridge, the fellow found himself a hiding place in a clump of laurel about 30 feet above the road, and Joseph both saw and heard him break off some branches as if to clear his view of the road. Then he sat down.

"Something devilish queer about this fellow, what?" Joseph decided. He got off his horse cautiously and slipped from tree to tree until he was within 40 yards of the man, when he sat down behind a clump of manzanita to await developments. Through his binoculars he could now make out the man's form; he saw that the fellow's rifle rested in a crotch in a laurel bush.

"He's waiting for somebody," Joseph concluded. "By Jove, a bally assassin, what? The blighter will bear close watching for a bit, I fancy."

Suddenly, up the valley, Joseph caught a faint rumbling. He knew that would be his master's automobile crossing a loosely planked little bridge across one of the small lateral streams that flowed down the hillside to Eden Valley creek. Instantly there was a slight movement in the laurel bush; a little later Nate Tichenor's car hove into view. Joseph saw the hiding man's hand come up and grasp the rifle, saw his head come down to cuddle the stock—so Joseph, horribly excited but with his duty clear before him, sighted on the man's head and pulled away. He was rewarded by hearing a grunt; then the bushes parted, the man leaped down into the road and scuttled across it for the haven of the clump of sugar pines in which Joseph was hidden. As he passed the bush behind which Joseph knelt concealed, the valet leaped up followed and banged the fellow heartily over the head with his rifle barrel. Then he helped himself to the stranger's rifle and stepped out into the road.

Nate Tichenor questioned Pitt River Charley and when the halfbreed refused to talk and took refuge in aboriginal sullenness, Rube Tenney used the ramrod, while his victim hung helpless from a limb, his toes just touching the earth. Science Hopes to Determine Freshness of Meat by the Use of Electric Current

At Gloucester, Mass., where the artists go every summer, the United States bureau of fisheries maintains a station where Drs. Maurice E. Stansby and James M. Lemon are substituting science for the hand, the eye and the nose in judging the freshness of fish. You see them grinding up a had dock, shaking it up with some water, then adding a little quinhydrone and finally passing a feeble electric current through the mass. A voltmeter, familiar to radio enthusiasts as a potentiometer, tells how many volts are passing through and hence indicates how fresh the fish is, says Waldemar Kaempffert in the New York Times. The test means simply that more electricity can be passed through a fresh than through a stale fish.

Clearly this is no test to housewives. But dealers who buy and sell fish by the carload and shipload can make money by use of it. "It is not necessary to tell how long it has been since a fish was caught," say Stansby and Lemon, "but it is important to know how much longer a fish may be expected to keep in an edible condition if handled properly."

After a fish is landed it stiffens which explains why firm flesh has always been the housewife's tried and true test of freshness. Soon a softening process sets in. First the complex proteins break down. Later the bacteria set to work and bring about further decomposition. Mere softening detracts from the value of a fish but not from its edibility. Bacteria spoil the fish.

Since fish is packed in ice for as long as two weeks, during which softening may occur, the test is of commercial importance. The scientists believe that their method may be equally applicable to meat and other packable house products.

"It's quite all right, Mr. Tichenor," he shouted. "Joseph speaking, sir. The blighter was out to scupper you, I fancy, but I've scuppered him. Do come and have a look at the rascal, sir."

Nate drove up, alighted and followed Joseph into the pine grove, where he rolled the unconscious man over and looked at him. "That's Pitt River Charley," he announced. "He's a half-breed Indian and years ago he used to be a professional killer. I thought the fool had retired, but somebody must have made it worth his while to get back into harness. Are you quite certain he was gunning for me, Joseph?"

"Absolutely, sir. I've been watching him for an hour, sir. His gun was at his shoulder and he was sighting on you, sir, when I fired at his head, sir."

"You're a rotten shot, at that range, Joseph. You've put a .22 calibre bullet through his biceps. However, it sufficed to spoil his plan and stampered him, so he ran for these trees."

He helped himself to the canteen on Joseph's saddle and dashed some water over Pitt River Charley's dusky face. Then he emptied the fellow's pockets and found two hundred and fifty dollars in crisp new bills. Tichenor grinned at his servant. "It seems I'm worth five hundred dollars dead to somebody, Joseph. It's the custom to pay half down and the remainder upon completion of the job, and whoever hired this fellow is a fool, because Pitt River Charley would have worked for a lot less money."

"Good G—d, sir," cried the horrified Joseph.

"Well, you haven't got a killing on your honest British soul, Joseph, and I'm obliged to you for saving my life." Joseph was horribly embarrassed when Tichenor slapped his back several times and assured him he was a brick and a stout fellow and that he, Tichenor, craved a glimpse of the man who could thereafter pry Joseph loose from his service. "I'll guard this fellow," he continued, "while you take the car, drive up to the Kershaw ranch and without letting Miss Kershaw know anything about this affair, find Rube Tenney, her superintendent, and tell him I want to see him immediately. He's to come back in the car with you and bring his riata."

"Sorter like the old days ag'in, ain't it, son?" Mr. Tenney declared, as he gazed upon Pitt River Charley, now recovered consciousness and sitting with his back against the bole of a tree, his dark, evil face absolutely expressionless. He turned to the valet.

"You drive down the road a bit, hombre, and wait there fifteen minutes. Then come back with the car. Me an Mr. Tichenor's goin' to hold court here an' it's to be a private session."

He removed the steel ramrod from the butt of Joseph's little rifle, screwed it together and wrapped his bandana handkerchief around one end, in order to get a good grip on it.

He grasped a handful of shirt in the middle of Pitt River Charley's back and with one savage jerk the man's torso was naked.

"Run along, Joseph," Tichenor ordered gently, "or you'll be sick to your stomach." He was already binding Pitt River Charley's hands in the loop of Rube Tenney's riata, and Mr. Tenney was gazing earnestly upward for a limb to pass the rope over.

So Joseph, sickened, departed in the car and before he had gone two hundred yards he heard a succession of screams echoing through the valley. "They're cutting 'is bally back to ribbons with that steel ramrod," the valet decided.

Nate Tichenor questioned Pitt River Charley and when the halfbreed refused to talk and took refuge in aboriginal sullenness, Rube Tenney used the ramrod, while his victim hung helpless from a limb, his toes just touching the earth. His judges know his kind—knew that only quick work and dirty work would bring the information so vitally needed.

Howe About:

Forgiveness
Wedded Happiness
Suspicious Characters

© Bell Syndicate.—WNU Service.

By ED HOWE

DURING a long life certain persons have been so unfair and unreasonable with me I am not able to forgive them; I cannot again trust or associate with them.

I have adopted this policy as the easiest and best way. If I had opportunity to punish them, I should not do so. I do not talk about them, or think of them when I can help it.

I believe in all decency, but this is the best I can do with my enemies. Any suggestion that I love them is plainly silly to me; I cannot so much as forgive them. The best I can do is to let them alone.

In 1816 a Frenchman made an estimate as to happiness of husbands and wives in England. Out of every hundred thousand population, he concluded, only thirteen of the married were fairly happy. Of those passing for happy, he estimated the number at 3,325 per 100,000. Of those living in open hostility, he found 17,345; 13,279 of the secretly discontented, and 58,406 of the materially indifferent. Nearly 8,000 ran away or were divorced during the year. . . . Conditions are better in 1932 than in 1816. In my section there is a city of 500,000. I do not believe only 65 married persons in it are only fairly happy. In my own town there are 15,000 souls. According to this estimate, we have something like one and a half married persons who are fairly happy. I am certain we can do better than that. . . . Here is more criticism of marriage far beyond reason or fact.

I know a man who married a second time. Within a day or two his wife began regulating him. "Now looky here, Alice," he said, "we might as well understand each other. I have recently secured, at great expense, trouble and humiliation, divorce from a woman who nagged me. I specially dislike nagging; I regard it as an insult, and it specially humiliates and angers me. If you cannot resist the temptation, let us part now, that I may avoid the life of shame from which I lately fled."

Every criminal is under suspicion in his community before he engages in crime. Every man who will be arrested next week is labeled as a probability for arrest this week. People wonder how he makes a living; his habits are not the normal habits of the steady men of the community.

We must tighten up on suspicious characters who have no visible means of support. Of my acquaintances I can make an accurate list of those liable to be arrested; so can you. The cost of crime to the worthy majority is enormous and burdensome. I see men on the streets every day who should be promptly arrested as vagrants, as a precautionary measure; they violate the law as loafers, dead beats and adventurers.

Occasionally a written sentence is so wise and true as to be worthy of a place in the permanent philosophy of every fairly intelligent and honest man.

I know of no American who may be credited with a greater number of such rare exhibitions than Abraham Lincoln. And the sentences I admire were cast in almost perfect form; nothing can be taken from them nothing added, without harm. Yet Lincoln was not a professional writer. He almost never went to school; of young men of today not one in a hundred had as poor a start as Lincoln.

Of all Americans of large equipment I regard Ralph Waldo Emerson as perhaps the ablest writer. Lacking Emerson's enormous technical education, Lincoln was timid, and wrote sparingly. I can point out many specimens of folly in Emerson's writing; none in Lincoln's he intended for the public. Some of his private love letters were foolish, but these were intended for the fire.

And no one should be criticized for folly in love.

"Before the gates of excellence," wrote Hesiod, "the high gods have placed Sweat. Long is the road thence, and rough and steep at the first; but when the height is achieved, then there is ease, though grievously hard in the earning."

Probably seven out of ten people have grumbled about the moving pictures and thought they could write better plays, but they have not done so. . . . The mechanics of the picture theaters have been improved until they are little short of marvelous, but authors and producers show less improvement. (Science always does better than the philosophers or intellectuals who claim to know more than mechanics).

Great men are largely those who have managed to do a good deal of work at odd times while greatly bothered with love affairs.

Ibsen had a bad start; at eighteen he had a serious affair with a hired girl, and came near going to the devil before she and her child were disposed of, but Ibsen managed to survive, in a way.

Books are canned gossip, and rarely as interesting as gossip fresh from the homes, the streets, and other places of yesterday.

A Little Bit Humorous

BETTER ORDER A HAM

Mrs. Brown always allowed her maid to have her young man in the kitchen in the evening. But knowing the girl was entertaining a new swain, she stole downstairs and listened at the kitchen door.

Next morning she said to her maid: "Mary, your new young man seems very quiet. I never hear any sound of talking while he is here."

"No, mum," replied the girl, "he's that shy he's done nothing but eat up to now."—The Northern Mail.

Glad Surprise

"What do my old friends want?" said Senator Sorghum when a group of visitors was announced.

"They have a glad surprise for you. They have taken the trouble to come and assure you personally that they don't want anything."

Feared the Worst

"He said you were what?" "Laconic." "What does that mean?" "Dunno. But I gave him one on the nose to be on the safe side."—Gazzettino Illustrato.

WOMAN'S RIGHTS AGAIN

"Does your wife ever go through your pockets while you are asleep?" "No, she does it openly. Maintains her rights of search and seizure."

The New School

"You have not been as eloquent as of yore." "No," answered Senator Sorghum. "In days like these a man has to study statistics." "Do you enjoy them?" "No. In fact, it seems downright hard for old-timers like me to quit reveling in figures of speech and get back to plain old mental arithmetic."

The Real Job

Two men were chatting in the club-room. "This business about beautifying golf courses is a lot of rubbish!" said one warmly. "The question of scenery shouldn't enter into golf at all." "Quite," agreed the other, "but the job is to keep one's golf from entering into the scenery."—Tatler.

Hard Job in Store

"Mummy," said the daughter of the house, "how long is it to my birthday?"

Mother looked thoughtful.

"Why, it isn't long now, darling," she replied.

It was the child's turn to look thoughtful. Then slowly she said:

"Well, I suppose it's almost time for me to begin to be a good girl."

Numbered

"You must come and see me, my dear," said a woman to a little girl acquaintance. "Do you know my number?"

"Oh, yes," replied the child; "Daddy says you always live at sixes and sevens."

SCIENCE TO GIVE EFFECT OF LIFE TO ANCIENT DEAD

The pharaoh whose mummified body has reposed in the desert tomb for 50 centuries may be restored to essentially the same appearance he had the hour he died. The lost art of the Egyptian mummifier can be reversed and the effects of millenniums wiped away by the magic of modern science, according to a report made to the Journal of Physical Anthropology at Washington by Dr. J. Gillman, South African anatomist. One need stop only just short of the process of bringing the man to life again.

The discovery resulted from experiments with the naturally mummified bodies of Bantu tribesmen, believed to be about two centuries old which were restored to practically lifelike appearance by being kept for 14 days in a solution of sodium hydroxide and alcohol, the action of which could be carefully controlled. "The possibilities of the application of this method are infinite," Gillman reports. By careful manipulation the facial and general bodily features of the ancient pharaohs and their courts could be returned as if magically to their original state.

"After this treatment the color returns to the skin, together with the characters of skeleton and hair." The natural ridges that occur in the skin can also be restored, and, had the hand been present, it would have been possible to revive the epidermal ridges and fossa and fingerprints could have been taken with the greatest of ease."

IS CRAZY WATER EPSOM SALTS

No, says Dr. W. E. Fitch in nation-wide broadcast over N.B.C. network

NOT A MAN-MADE DRUG

Tells why natural mineral water is so often beneficial for "rheumatic" aches and pains

On a recent Sunday afternoon broadcast on the National Broadcasting network the following discussion took place between Mr. Gene Arnold and Dr. W. E. Fitch, internationally known authority on natural mineral waters.

GENE ARNOLD: "I receive letters from people saying they heard that Crazy Water Crystals are made of nothing but salts—Epsom Salts or Glauber's Salts. These people want to know if it's true you can buy some of these salts for a few cents, and get the same effect as you do with Crazy Water Crystals."

DR. FITCH: "No, it is NOT true." GENE ARNOLD: "I'm glad to hear you say that, because I know your opinion is worth a great deal. But will you explain a little more about it? What are the true facts?"

DR. FITCH: "The facts are that it has always been hard for a few doubting Thomases and skeptics to believe that old Mother Nature knows how to prepare and compound natural mineral waters in a way that cannot be duplicated in a laboratory. In the course of my studies I have found that those same doubts were expressed Two Thousand Years Ago, in the early days of natural mineral water therapy. The truth is that natural mineral water and natural crystals from such waters are as different from synthetic or artificial salts as day from night. And that's why the medical profession has always been in favor of the Natural Waters—has always insisted that they are the one product of Nature that cannot be imitated successfully by man. People have tried for many, many years to make up synthetic concoctions to take their place but they do not have the same effect. The predominating chemical constituent of Crazy Water Crystals is sodium sulphate, but it is in its Natural State, and has a far different physiological effect than the synthetic salts made in a laboratory. When you buy salts for a few cents you get just what you pay for—a dose of salts. But when you use Crazy Water Crystals, you get undiluted minerals in their natural state, taken from natural mineral water by evaporation with nothing added."

That is why Crazy Water Crystals have proven themselves so beneficial in the treatment of "rheumatic" aches and pains. Thousands of people in all parts of the United States testify to this.

If you, or any of your friends, suffer from "rheumatic" pains we suggest you investigate Crazy Water Crystals immediately. Ask any of the millions who have used them. Then get a standard size box—it costs only $1.50 and is ample for at least three weeks treatment. Crazy Water Company, Mineral Wells, Texas.

FRIENDS OF CORONER GUNN
SAY HE IS WELL QUALIFIED

Many admirers and friends of Coroner Chester D. Gunn from all sections of the county last week attended "open house" celebration which marked the opening of "Gunn for Coroner" headquarters in the Bridges Bldg., Sixth avenue and C street, San Diego.

Coroner Gunn's enviable record in office during four years is adequate proof that he should be returned to that office for the next four years, Manager McGann stated.

"We are proud of the record our candidate has made," he declared. "While the duties of the Coroner's office are among the most important of those of county officials and the responsibilities are among the heaviest and strictest, the work itself is delicate and demands infinite tact and good judgment. Coroner Gunn has proved that his office can be run upon a fair and impartial basis."

Additional to the Coroner's duties, the new county charter has directed that the Coroner shall assume the duties of Public Administrator, beginning January 7, 1935. The details of this office can be absorbed readily and efficiently at a distinct saving to taxpayers, those who have made a study of the two offices declare.

Coroner Gunn is among the most popular and respected of county officials. His friendliness and helpfulness has gained him a host of staunch supporters, not only as Coroner but as Superintendent of Edgemoor Farm for a number of years. His father, Chester Gunn, Sr., is well remembered as a San Diego county pioneer in Julian, and later as a county supervisor and county horticultural commissioner.

Friends of Coroner Gunn thruout the county are urged to write in to "Gunn for Coroner" headquarters for free literature, cards and stickers, which they are asked to distribute in their communities. Also, Coroner Gunn has announced that he will be glad to talk personally with all interested voters.
